Virginia’s Gender Specific Substance Abuse Treatment Services for Pregnant and Parenting Women

Women are more likely to remain in treatment and evidence the greatest benefits when the services they receive are gender specific, family focused, allow the women to keep her children in treatment with her and include both clinical and support services. The degree of structure and support a woman requires varies depending upon the severity of her use, the presence of co-occurring mental health problems and socioeconomic problems as well as the degree of support available to her in her environment. “One size does not fit all” and the intensity of services a woman requires may vary over time. Different levels of treatment are available such as outpatient, intensive outpatient, and residential. In order to determine an individual’s treatment needs and the appropriate level of treatment, they need to be assessed by a substance abuse professional.

Outpatient Substance Abuse Treatment

Virginia’s Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Services (DBHDS) provides public services through the community service board (CSB) system for individuals who have a mental health or substance use disorder and/or an intellectual disability.

- Every CSB is required to provide gender specific substance abuse services for pregnant and parenting women. The exact nature and extent of these services varies by CSB depending upon the community’s needs and resources.
- All CSBs are required to give treatment priority to pregnant substance using women and provide them with services within 48 hours of their request.

To learn more about services available in your community, contact your local CSB.

Women and providers can locate the CSB which serves their community by going to the DBHDS website http://www.dbhds.virginia.gov and clicking on Locating Services/Get Help.
